Dear Pelham School Families,

We are pleased to announce that the Pelham Phone books will be distributed to families today, so please check backpacks! The Pelham Phone books are a long-standing tradition that allows families and students to connect with each other as needed. It is not a comprehensive resource for every student at Pelham as personal contact information is only shared with the permission of families, and some families have chosen not to be a part of this book. There is only one book distributed to each family, with a copy going home with the eldest child in the family. If you need an additional copy, please contact the school. I'd like to thank Sage Scott and her mother, Lynn Thompson for their time and effort in putting this school community resource together. It looks great!

I'd like to extend an invitation to families and community members to attend two performances at Pelham School this month. This coming Tuesday brings Greg Kinney, professionally trained actor, in an entertaining one-man show. He has been in several movies and numerous theatrical productions, commercials, and print ads. As part of the Educate Us Production Group, he portrays Afro-American characters from history. In honor of Martin Luther King, for the first part of the performance, he will play Dr. Martin Luther King in "I Had A Dream: A Conversation With A Friend" and for the second half he will perform as Louis Armstrong in "The Life of Louis Armstrong." On January 19, the UMass Dancers will be coming to entertain students. This year's tour includes a wide variety of dance styles and includes modern dance, jazz, fusions, and ballet. We are fortunate to have these opportunities to bring theater, dance, and music into Pelham School to enhance our programs and build awareness of the arts for our students.

Have a great weekend!

Sincerely,

Lisa Desjarlais

Quinlan's Quill

I hope you all had a lovely holiday break. I know that it was difficult to get back for many of the students and for the teachers. We are back in the swing of things in fifth grade with a lot of new units. We are starting our Constitution Unit this week where we will learn about the government and how it is set up. Students will gain knowledge of how The Constitution was created, of checks and balances, the roles of the branches of government, and a sense of the importance of the document.

Along with this unit, students will be reading Biographies about important people during this time period. Students will pick a biography and learn how to read a non-fiction book, take notes, and summarize a chapter. This will be a whole class literature unit.

Students will be writing a Persuasive Essay based on a topic that they find interesting. They will choose a topic and find facts concerning that topic. We will start with a paragraph from a packet that I have collected and then they will be able to choose a topic that interests them.

In math we will be learning double-digit division along with mean, median, mode and range. We will also be working with the Investigation Unit Prisms and Pyramids. Students continue to work on Problem Solving and they are becoming more accurate and efficient.

It is great to be back, even if we are all a little bleary-eyed and our brains are in a little slower mode. I look forward to a great January and February.

Sixth Grade News

We're back from break and are busy finishing up some projects. The students wrote summaries of the friendship books they read over vacation, and created a small book you can see on the bulletin board outside our classroom. We are ending our Maps and Globes unit by looking at maps and using latitude and longitude to locate specific places. In writing, we are fine tuning our five paragraph essays about people who are important to us. In math, we are a few lessons away from starting the review for the Unit 4 test on working with fractions and decimals. In Unit 5 we will "operate" on fractions and decimals.

This week we started our nonfiction unit, and students chose books to read. In about two weeks we'll start our research reports on ancient cultures. Students will choose a topic that interests them, use notecards to gather information, write a thesis statement, an outline, and finally, the report. Meanwhile we are practicing finding the main idea in reading skills, and how to use commas properly. In another week or so, we'll start the robotics unit. After building small Lego robots, students will learn to program them to move, speak, and use distance and light sensors.

Thank you for the tissue and granola bar donations. They are much appreciated!
